Up to the end of 1949 approximately 9,000 agricultural machines, with a total value of 31.5 million schillings, could be bought out of counterpart funds. Through the formation of agricultural machine cooperatives (about 33) even medium and small-sized farms were able to share in the advantages of technical modernization. The progress of electrification in rural areas supplied light and current to 4,800 farms. Storehouses and freezer lockers have been built in fruit producing areas. In addition, dairies and cheese making plants have been erected from ERP funds.

Further investments in the agricultural sphere are being carried out in accord with the investment program of 1950-52. For these purposes 270 million schillings were released from counterpart funds in 1950 (i.e., 43.6 per cent of the 620 million schillings provided in the agricultural priority program, or 34.6 per cent of the total of 780 million schillings provided in the whole program).

In forestry (exports), which is of paramount importance to Austria, the approximate prewar level of wood and timber output and supply has been achieved through various rationalizations and especially better means of transport and better roads. In 1948 the timber output was 8.24 million cubic meters (Festmeter); in 1949 already it was 9.24 million cubic meters; in 1950 the output could be increased to slightly over 10 million cubic meters.

The increasing production of timber and the stoppage of exports of undressed timber made it possible to supply sawmills and timber finishing plants with bigger quantities of wood in 1949 and 1950 than prior to the war. In 1949, 2.50 million cubic meters of whole timber were planed. In 1950 the amount was 4.41 million cubic meters as compared to 3.14 million cubic meters in 1937. The paper, cellulose, wood fiber and pulp industries could be provided to an increasing extent with all necessary raw materials (especially wood pulp); thus, covering not only the domestic needs but also enabling Austria to gain a foothold in former export markets.

The forestry and sawmill industry received 90 million schillings in 1950 out of counterpart funds and, in addition, 22.5 million schillings in December 1950 to be carried forward for use in 1951.
